

The winery and with it my story...

Our family has been growing wine since the 17th century, the small operation and the knowledge about the wine have been handed over from generation to generation.

In 1985, my parents gave me a small vineyard with an area of 1700 m² and my passion for wine production began.

After helping my family in the vineyards from an early age, I began to replant this area and tend to cultivate it mainly by hand.

In the following years I bought vineyards, built a press house and a wine cellar and created the necessary framework for an economical, yet environmentally friendly, high quality wine production.

Viticulture is a passion, it requires love, hard work and patience and has always been my hobby. At the end of 2006 I decided to concentrate fully on my vineyards and to further develop viticulture. Today I manage a total of 1.8 hectares - a small, but exquisite, carefully managed wine production.

Since the 2013 vintage, my company has been a recognized organic wine company of which I am very proud not only to love the environment, but also out of complete conviction.

In 2014 we harvested the first resistant varieties, which we are continuously expanding. Our Johanniter has already been awarded gold several times at the international PIWI wine award and the Cabernet Cortis, which is entering its fifth vintage this year, is an excellent red wine that already has many enthusiastic fans. Both are available in a limited, selected amount.
